

Sarah had always been Lanes strength - the woman who saw him through all the difficult times, even the death of a team member who had been like a brother to him. Finally, he had decided to leave the military and devote his time to the love of his life and his newborn daughter. But fate steps in, and all that changes in the matter of one terrible day. Left alone to raise his baby daughter, Lane struggles to find a footing on the path toward the future that is his new reality. With the help of his ex-military buddies, their significant others and friends, he begins to live again, helming a new business and taking care of his child. Sydney has been friends with Clementine through college and is now her partner in a new business venture. Their friendship extends to Clementines fiance, Jett, along with his buddies from his military service, so when Lanes wife passes away unexpectedly, Sydney is there to help support him and his infant daughter in any way needed. She owes Lane for saving her life during a mission trip, and she had been friends with Sarah. The circle of friends come together to support Lane in his grief, but none of them are expecting the changes that assistance might bring.
