

A personal account of how the author and his wife coped with the devastating news when he was diagnosed with ALS and told he only had six months to live. They decided that they would try to enjoy to the utmost what little time they had left together, without wasting any on regrets. This book, an invaluable source of help and inspiration for anyone newly diagnosed with the illness, provides details of obstructions that have to be overcome and how it's possible, by trying to find the humour in every situation, to laugh at all the problems, so that a happy life is still within reach.
